what is it?

an arts festival, bringing new, edgy, unusual and challenging art, music, theatre and literature to a seaside town. it's made by artists living and working in worthing, with some special guests.

why is it happening?

because existing festivals in worthing don't offer the challenge and adventure that audiences deserve.

who's behind it?

artist, writer and performer dan thompson and director and producer glenda harkess are the festival's artistic directors, dan runs the revolutionary arts group and glenda runs theatre akimbo. they've brought lots of friends along for the ride.

how can i get involved?

the whole festival is designed to give you a look behind the scenes, at the nuts and bolts of contemporary art. you can attend early readings of new plays, take part in composing a piece of 'new music', spend an afternoon working out how to run your own festival or help build a picture of worthing in 2009.
